

May
2003

Chips & Salsa

Kreveres in Queretaro

Success in Ministry & How We define it!

It is our desire to model and equip the local church by creating relevant environments for the youth of Mexico. Well this week our church has asked us to help create a café environment on Sunday nights for the youth! This is not only happening in our church, but 2 other churches we work with are developing relevant environments as well! To us this is success!

What is Next . . .

- June 9 - Summer Interns arrive (including Stephen Martin from Georgia Tech & NPCC)

Don't forget to check out the latest goodies at :

www.krevere.com

julian@krevere.com
whitney@krevere.com

NPCC Goes South of the Border

A short-term team from North Point Community Church recently came down to strategically assist our ministry by connecting local college students with our K-fe through presenting business conferences at the major universities in town. They talked to students and invited them to K-fe for practice interviews and workshops that were taking place at the K-fe over the weekend.

Their willingness and terrific attitude are exactly what we desire from a team, but rarely see it displayed so well. They were a terrific representation of NPCC as well as a catalyst for the ministry. They helped to open some very significant doors to ministry opportunities on the major campuses in Queretaro.

Our Mexican host family for 2 weeks, Abel and Iveth

Getting cultured...Mexican style

We always need help with Spanish so we decided to move in with a local Mexican Pastor and his wife for 2 weeks. They are about our age so we were able to connect very quickly. We not only learned Spanish but everything about Mexican daily life from cooking, to sports, to bible study.

Getting Plugged In (La Iglesia)

We have begun getting involved in a local church called Horizonte, which is one of our strategic partners here in Queretaro. Martin (the Mexican leader who runs the K-Fe) also acts as an assistant pastor at our church. Recently they invited us to their national conference for pastors and leaders, in Puerto Vallarta. The conference helped to explain all the values of their ministry and was a good time for building relationships with other church leaders.

Whitney's new friend: Paola

A few weeks ago after church, Whitney met Paola, a young girl new to church and not a Christian. The next few weeks, they hung out and seemed to have a connection. Paola shared that as she was learning more about God and felt strange doing some of the same old things with her friends. She been reading John and attending the youth group but really didn't have anyone to talk to about it. So Whitney offered to read with her and discuss it once a week. Immediately, she jumped at the chance and asked if she could invite her friend to join them. We can't wait to see what God does as they read His Word together.

Queretario Quickies

- 1- # of weeks between the US and Mexican showing of the movie "The Matrix"
- 14- # of hours it took to drive to Puerto Vallarta for a conference
- 10- # of hours it took to drive home (We learned to use the toll road)
- 2- # of cakes Julian had his faced shoved into for his b-day (Mexican tradition)
- 13- # of hours we worked daily when the NPCC team was in town
- 2- # of fans in our bedroom to combat the 100-degree weather at night with no AC
- 3- # of universities that we made contact with via the NPCC team